

FLOOD VICTIMS ARE CHEERED BY AID FROM HERE

Red Cross, Firemen And Legion Members Continue Collections.

HELP TO EVERETT IS WELCOMED

Contributions of cash, food and clothing are flowing steadily to the Red Cross office in the court house, the fire engine house and the American legion home here as the people of Gettysburg and Adams county give gratifying evidence of the desire to lend assistance to the thousands of victims of this week's floods in the eastern United States.

A telegram received at noon today at the Red Cross office here from national headquarters at Washington urging re-doubled efforts to exceed the quota assigned to this county only served to give additional impetus to the work that has been going on in this community for the past 48 hours.

Early this afternoon the cash received by the Red Cross was approaching the $900-mark, well on the way to the $1,250 quota set for the county chapter. But the Red Cross workers here are not aiming at raising only $1,250, they know that the need for food, medical care, shelter and clothing is increasing hourly in the flooded district and hope that gifts here may not stop at $2,500.

Mrs. Elsie Singmaster Lewars, president of the county Red Cross chapter that is coordinating the work of the collecting agencies here, took time this morning to express appreciation for the manner in which all organizations and individuals that have been called upon have responded. "The telephone operators are wonderful" she added as she placed and answered calls that kept the telephone in the Red Cross office in almost continuous service.

Three truckloads of food, clothing and other supplies left Gettysburg Friday. The first went to Harrisburg and was taken by members of Albert J. Lentz post of the American legion.

Truck Goes to Sunbury

A truck left Gettysburg about noon today for Sunbury where special requests have been issued for food and medicines. The truck was laden with those necessities. Before it had left local drug stores responded to telephone requests from the Red Cross and sent packages of drugs, grocery and meat stores sent contributions and farmers attending the local market sent generous donations to make up the car-load.

The truck was driven by Captain Francis Moran, commander of CCC camp No. 1. The Sunbury requests were received by telephone from relatives in that city by Mrs. H. D. Hoover, Seminary ridge. She also spoke with the Sunbury police.

Aid Welcome at Everett

It is probable that no supplies sent to any section of the flooded area were more appreciated than two truck loads taken from Gettysburg to Everett, 72 miles west of here at the Juniata river crossing on the Lincoln highway. There a community of nearly 3,000 had been completely inundated. Only two small stores were in operation there when the Gettysburg trucks arrived at 2 o'clock this morning. The supplies from here were the first the town had received since Tuesday.

Residents, clad in wet clothing, cold and many of them ill, accepted tearfully the first dry clothes and good food they had seen in days. The trip was made by the Gettysburg fire company service truck manned by James A. Aumen, Horace L. Bender, Paul Oyler, Gene Sickles, Edward Anzenberger, and Donald Jacobs. The second truck was donated and driven by Paul Little, York street, Burgess Wilbur J. Stallsmith and Victor Palmer accompanied Mr. Little. The trucks, loaded to capacity with food and goods collected by the fire company, the Red Cross and the Business and Professional girls' club, left Gettysburg at 9 o'clock Friday night and reached their destination after five hours of driving through heavy rain and snow.

The men returned at about 8 o'clock this morning to tell a tale of the desolation that followed in the wake of the flood in Everett, which has been described as one of the most severely damaged small (Continued on Page Two)

SPRING GREENS ARE OFFERED AT 2 MARKETS

Eggs Bring 18 and 20 Cents a Dozen; Demand for Butter.

Spring greens consisting of dandelion, water cress and salsify were to be had on the two Gettysburg markets this morning. A small number of patrons turned out to take advantage of the weekly offerings of the more than twenty hucksters attending.

While the price of eggs again declined today, sales were slow, and the abundant supply was offered at 18 cents a dozen generally, with a few marketmen asking 20 cents a dozen. Butter remained firm at 30 cents a pound, and was in demand. Dressed chickens remained at 34 cents a pound, and averaged from 65 cents each to $1.95. Ducks were from $1 to $2.10 each.

LARGE AUDIENCE AT BIGLER PLAY

"Adam and Eva," Spring Performance, Pleases Patrons With Sets and Acting.

Standing room was at a premium Friday evening when the Peter Pan players, of Biglerville high school, presented their annual spring play, "Adam and Eva," to the largest single night audience in the history of Biglerville theatricals.

In the setting of the home of the "King" family, the formal clothes of the spoiled daughters and their guests presented a pleasing contrast to the chicken farm of the last act which was well executed by Richard Fohl who made and designed both sets. He was highly praised for his work.

Most of the humor of the evening was furnished by Lester Guise. William Gindlesperger and Wallace Coddington. Lester Guise as "Mr. King," the wealthy father, was particularly effective in the scene in which he thought he was very ill. William Gindlesperger in the role of "Lord Andrew Gordon" impressed everyone with his command of the English accent. Wallace Coddington, a newcomer in Biglerville plays, entertained the audience with both voice and gesture as he cavorted about the stage in the role of Uncle Horace.

Miss Dorothy Walton as Julie DeWitt was unusually striking in her stage appearances and depicted well the character of "Julie DeWitt," the older daughter. Eleanor Dill as "Eva," the younger daughter, was (Continued on Page Two)

Mrs. Bertha M. Harris, who will conduct the school, has been in charge of some of the largest cooking schools held throughout the country in the past few months, including St. Louis, Indianapolis, Grand Rapids, Charleston, West Virginia and others. Mrs. Harris is completing her eighteenth consecutive year as a cooking school demonstrator. This week she is conducting a school in Youngstown, Ohio.

'CYCLE STRIKES TIRE IN STREET; OFFICER INJURED

G. S. Harleman, Highway Patrolman, Suffers Laceration, Brush Burns.

When the wheel of the sidecar of his motorcycle struck a spare tire lying nearly in the center of Chambersburg street, Friday evening, the cycle overturned and Patrolman George S. Harleman of the local substation of the highway patrol was thrown to the roadway and injured.

Taken to the Annie M. Warner hospital by Charles J. Myers, who lives near the scene of the accident, Harleman was treated for a deep laceration over the left eye and brush burns of the left cheek. After being treated he returned to the sub-station on Buford avenue.

The officer, returning from his first patrol of local highways since Tuesday, having been assigned to special duty in the flood area, was driving west on Buford avenue at about 7:25 o'clock. At a point near the residence of W. Preston Hull, Chambersburg street, the officer failed to notice a spare tire and rim lying near the center of his lane of traffic and was caught unaware when the wheel of his machine struck the obstruction. The sidecar bounded into the air and the cycle turned over on its left side, throwing the patrolman from his seat on the vehicle.

Tire Rolled Away

The tire, according to Sergeant S. Sheaffer of the local sub-station who investigated, had been allowed to roll to the center of the street by James Diego, a Lancaster truck driver, who had parked his truck on the north side of the street while he repaired a flat tire. Diego said he had not retrieved the inflated tire when it rolled to the center of (Continued on Page Two)

It had first been reported to the police that the accident had been a hit-and-run affair.

The patrolman said that Harry Ginter, 68, Shepherdstown, had walked across the highway for a bucket. As he turned around for the return trip, he walked against the side of the Myers car. communities of the entire flood section.

The condition at Everett was revealed to local workers late Friday night when officials at Harrisburg said that there was no immediate need for food and clothing in that city but that the gifts should be taken to the more needy sections. A telephone call to the office of Governor George H. Earle by Miss Margaret McMillan revealed that Everett was in sore distress. Another telephone call to Everett confirmed the information and the trucks started on their way after the cargoes had been carefully packed and labeled.

County Cooperates

Spontaneous response was being received from all parts of the county to the call for cash and supplies. Red Cross workers in all parts of the county were receiving contributions.

The Canon Shoe factory at McSherrytown turned over $125 to the fund Friday afternoon. The community of Biglerville gave $100. Truckloads of supplies were being accepted from Littlestown and other county towns. Edward Taughinbaugh, Hunterstown, came to the Red Cross office at the court house this morning and placed his truck at the disposal of the officials. It was pressed into service at once in the work of collecting foods and clothing.

As rapidly as the donations are collected, it is planned to rush them by truck to the stricken areas. Additional trucks may leave this town tonight and Sunday for Everett, Sunbury or other points that are specially in need of assistance.

Pastors in churches in all sections of the county will ask their congregations to join in the work.

Local Boats Used

Boats located by Gettysburg residents for flood relief work in Harrisburg were pressed into service upon reaching Harrisburg, according to Lieutenant James R. McConaghe. It is not known when the boats will be returned here.

Lieutenant McConaghe stated that members of the local CCC camps are assisting in relief work, but expect to have their entire personnel summoned to Harrisburg when waters recede enough to allow the tremendous task of cleaning up debris. WAYNESBORO WINS DEBATE

On the basis of returns from the final series of debates conducted Friday night at Gettysburg, Waynesboro and Hanover high schools, debating squads from Waynesboro high school will represent the triangle in the southern Pennsylvania Forensic league finals at Gettysburg college April 4.

The Gettysburg high school negative squad won the decision of the judges in a debate with a Hanover junior high school Friday evening. The vote was two to one. In a debate in the Gettysburg high school auditorium at the same hour, the Gettysburg affirmative team lost to representatives of Waynesboro high school by a three-to-nothing decision.

Last Friday in simultaneous debates conducted at the three high schools, the negative squads won on home platforms. On the basis of points given each term by the judges in their decisions, the Waynesboro high school squads are victors. The Waynesboro affirmative team lost to the Hanover negative debaters Friday night at Waynesboro. In all six debates decisions went to the speakers who upheld the negative side of the question "Resolved: That the legislatures of the several states should enact laws to provide for free medical care for all at public expense."

Members of the victorious negative team from the local high school who journeyed to Hanover were George Hanawalt, Jean Cleveland and Edith Fissel. The judges for that contest were Professor George R. Larkin, Professor Lester O. Johnson, both of Gettysburg college; and C. P. Keefer, principal of the New Oxford high school. Louis D. Baldwin, principal of Eichelberger Senior high school at Hanover, presided at the debate.

CAPITAL FOUR TO SING HERE

Quartet From Harrisburg to Present 10 Selections at Concert, Tuesday.

The "Capital City Quartet," of Harrisburg, who will appear in the third of the Gettysburg college concert series in Bruns chapel Tuesday evening, March 24, at 8:45 o'clock, has announced a familiar and varied program for its fourth appearance before a Gettysburg audience.

In the first part, the quartet, which is composed of Harry M. Etter, tenor; E. LeVern Phelps, tenor; Robert H. Bagnell, baritone; Robert E. Dilworth, bass; and Dewitt Waters, pianist, will present the "Luck of Eden Hall," a choral ballad, by Cecil Forsythe. The "Luck of Eden Hall" is a cup which has been in the possession of the Musgrave family, of Eden Hall, Cumberland, for many centuries. The fortunes of the house are supposed to depend upon its preservation. The time of singing for this number is about 20 minutes.

The second number is "O Du Mein Holder Abendstern," from "Tannhauser," and is perhaps the best known bass aria of any of Wagner's operas. This selection will be sung by Mr. Dilworth. Mr. Phelps and Mr. Bagnell, for the third number on the program, will sing a duet, "Solenne En Quest'ora," from the opera "La Forza Del Destino," by Verdi. "Ingenico" reguena mass, by Verdi, will be sung by Mr. Etter.

The last number of the group is the "Gypsy Trail," in quartet arrangement in which Ted B. Gallo-way, the composer, pictures the romantic, carefree philosophy of the Romany.

Mr. Phelps will sing the "Arioso," by Diaz, from the French opera, "Benvenuto," based on the life of the Italian goldsmith, Benvenuto Cellini. In conclusion, the quartet will sing a paraphrase of the quartet from "Rigoletto," by Verdi.

GUN CLUB DINES TONIGHT

The Monterey gun club, comprised largely of local citizens, will hold its annual dinner at the club house along the Lincoln highway, just east of Caledonia park, this evening.

CLUB TO DINE AT HANOVER "Y. W."

The Gettysburg Business and Professional girls' club visited the Gettysburg steam laundry and the United telephone exchange Friday night instead of holding their regular meeting. At the laundry the visitors were conducted through the plant by C. Ray Rupp, the proprietor, and at the telephone exchange the group was taken in charge by Miss Maude Whiteleather, regular night operator.

Forty members of the club plan to attend an annual nation-wide observance banquet to be held by the Hanover club in the Y. W. C. A. in that city, Tuesday night, at 6:30 o'clock. The Gettysburg club members will meet at the local Y. W. C. A. at 6 o'clock where transportation to the banquet will be provided. The topic for the banquet is "Whither Freedom?"

Arrangements for the participation of the local club in the event are in the hands of the following committee: Gertrude Little, Mrs. Florence Grider, Mrs. John Harbaugh, Mildred Moser, Elizabeth Ohler, Carolyn Rupp, Elizabeth Scott and Louetta Sharretts.

AM AGENT AIDS COLLECTIONS

Golden Rain

by Margaret Wildemer

SYNOPSIS: Through Morgan Black, boarder in her Aunt Ella's decaying old mansion, Iris Lanning has found her brother Owen and her Aunt Phina. Iris believed her brother dead. But in her happiness at seeing that Owen is a fine chap, and that her Aunt Phina is the best of friends, she is ready to let a little Morgan's attitude. He seems to fear that Iris will be removed from her simple and appropriate setting, and placed in artificial surroundings less suitable. Aunt Phina is offering Iris a luxurious home in New York.

Chapter 14

STRONG WORDS

"You would spend your winters with us in our Park Avenue apartment, and the summers either on Long Island or traveling," Phina went on. "I can give you everything you should have, and I will. With me, you should make the sort of marriage that is right for you."

Owen's words had almost made her say an eager yes; but Phina's were so detached and cool that something in her shivered away for a moment. The orchestra was playing a tripping dance of Debussy; the chatter of groups around them, the hurry of waiters, went on. After all, to go away from people who were fond of her, Phina didn't say anything about love.

"Do you want me—because you like me?" Iris said, stumbling a little.

Phina smiled. "It's wonderful—it's like a fairy-tale," she said. "But I can't say yes this minute. May I tell you tomorrow?"

"Of course you may," Phina said. But her air said that it was settled. "I have to telephone New York now," she added. "Wait for me in the lobby, when you finish."

"She keeps the shop tied to a telephone wire," said Owen. "Never a detail gets out from under Phina's hand."

"She's wonderful—and isn't she generous!"

Owen did not answer for a moment. Then with a visible effort, he began to talk.

"She is wonderful. And she is generous. But she never gives without some prospect of return. I'm being disloyal to her, but you're my own sister. I want you because you're young and kind and human and belong to me. Phina has some reason, I'm afraid, beyond all that—it may be merely to pay off Aunt Ella, whom she has never forgiven and never will. Come, anyhow, Iris, I need you like the devil! But don't take Phina for a romantic or you'll be disappointed."

"Why," said Iris, wide-eyed, "if there's something I could do for her to pay her back, I'd feel better about going! It's such a lot to take!"

Owen said no more. When she returned home she ran upstairs, happy, excited, to show herself.

"Isn't my hair nice this way? The rings are kept in shape with brilliantine so they can't come out! I don't look like a whisk-broom! And see my shoes—and my nails!" She showed the pointed pink-tipped fingers, the smart suede shoes and gloves, the dusky hair thinned and shaped and polished, outlining her living, lovely young head.

"Nothing anybody could do to it would make you anything but pretty," said Uncle William. "I suppose that's the way girls should look now."

"She's been taking you up into an exceedingly high mountain," Morgan said bitterly from the little table by the window where he had been at work.

It was too much, on top of this radiant, wonderful day! "It's not your affair as far as I can see," Iris told him with more of anger than she had shown since their first days together.

Before he could answer there was a rap on the half-open bedroom door.

"May we come in?" said Aunt Phina's cool loud voice.

Uncle Will sat up, a light on his face that transformed him for the moment into a young man.

"Josie, my dear!" He held his hands out.

There was no answering light on the face of the tall woman who came toward him. She smiled brightly, mechanically, as something told Iris she had been doing for years.

"I'm sorry to see you so ill," she said conventionally.

He stared up eagerly at the artificially smooth face, the set smile. "Do you know, my dear, you look no older now than you did then? I suppose—his thin sensitive face flushed as she took his hand—"I look an old man to you."

"You look as if you'd had a hard life. Not greatly changed otherwise. . . . I came to talk to you about Iris."

"Is Iris all you have to talk to me about, after all these years, Colleen?"

It had been a love-name. Iris, standing at the door with her brother and Morgan, knew that, and felt as if she were eavesdropping.

But Uncle Will had forgotten everything but the fact that after twenty years he was seeing a woman he had—Iris knew it now—never, in his gentle, romantic way stopped loving.

Josephine Ross's face broke up suddenly into convulsed lines. The smooth massaged youthfulness went; in its place came a haggard youth—she was like a ravaged girl. Her blunt-fingered capable hands wrenched themselves. Then she stiffened, staided. She too had forgotten her young people at the door.

Iris turned, self-conscious for those who were not self-conscious for themselves, and found that Owen and Morgan had gone. There was a small room at the stairhead, glassed in; half conservatory, half sewing room. She leaned her head back. Yes. They were there, with the doors closed; talking pleasantly enough, it seemed. That was all to the good anyway. . . .

"And you can reproach me now!" Josephine was saying furiously, standing over the bed where Uncle Will lay, propped with pillows, his thin cheeks flushed, his hands playing nervously with the edges of his gray dressing-gown. "You, that treated me as you did! You, that let your sister treat Jean and me the way she did!"

"I wanted to marry you, Josie," he said. "I loved you. I've never loved anybody else."

"And what good did that do? What did you do to prove it?" she demanded. "You asked me to marry you—two that were twice my age, with twice my knowledge of life. But we had to wait because your brother Lawrence was a genius, save the mark."

"And so my fine genius comes with you to the little house where Jean and I were working; young girls who asked nothing but to earn a living and be let alone, and the first I know he, that you had to help support because he was a genius—a genius, when he'd done nothing to show it at forty, walks off with my little sister to Philadelphia and marries her."

"He didn't stop for thoughts of duty. No, with all his good looks and his selfish charm and his clever talk and his grand ways, he sweeps off little Jean who would always believe anything she was told, and love anybody for a kind word, the poor little pretty thing. And still you persuaded me to wait, and still I waited."

"You were too well-bred and proper to marry me and let me go on working, and there wasn't the money to support Lawrence and Jean and for your marrying too. You loved me, but your duty to everybody on God's earth came before me—or your sister Ella and your brother Lawrence had you so cowed and hypnotized that you thought so."

Her voice had risen; it swept on like a flood. She came closer, and stood above the bed with clenched hands. "I even went to Philadelphia to work, so that your poverty-stricken fine family wouldn't be shamed by a well-brought-up girl earning an honest living—young affectionate fool I was!"

"Josie, Josie, if you had only explained some of this to me, long ago!"

"Explained it to you! Didn't I say it and scream it for five years? But what could two girls do against three middle-aged people who were all set one way, and two of them selfish? For I'll say for you, Billy, you were never selfish for yourself, only for Lawrence."

He held out a thin hand. She pushed it away.

"Never mind." She had gone back to her hard, smooth, English-accented voice. "We're through with all that, you and I, and I suppose I should thank you. It was the hate of you and your sister Ella that drove me along. To where I've got. To where I'll be. . . ."

She caught her breath.

He sat up in bed and caught her hands. "Josie, Josie, I'm sorry. We were selfish—we were cruel. But—"

She laughed suddenly, harshly, jerking her hands away.

She seemed about to come closer to him, when Aunt Ella, carrying the five o'clock tray of tea brushed past the rapt Iris, and then stood suddenly still.

AMUSEMENTS

MAJESTIC

With the ink scarcely dry on the first edition of the novel, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has brought to the screen "The Garden Murder Case," newest of S. S. Van Dine's stories of the sensational exploits of the scientific detective, Philo Vance.

It shows Monday and Tuesday at the Majestic theatre.

Edmund Lowe, long a reigning screen favorite, plays Vance. As an indication of the actor's popularity, it is the eighth photoplay in which he appeared in 12 months.

Virginia Bruce, who sacrificed her long blonde hair recently, feeling an attractive bob would bring her the ultra-smart roles she wants to play, displays her new hairdress as a society girl whose friends are menaced by mysterious and fearful death.

Girl Capture Class Honors: For the first time in the history of Gettysburg College, two girls have "walked off" with the highest scholastic honors in the graduating class.
The first honor goes to Miss Eleanor Peters, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Z. J. Peters, Guernsey, while the second honor goes to Miss Margaret Evans, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Evans, of Nanticoke.
Last year for the first time in the school's history, a girl was valedictorian. She was Miss Ruth Sheads, of Gettysburg.

Lloyd C. Keefauver Is Elected to Fill School Vacancy Caused by Resignation of W. D. Reynolds: At a special meeting of the Gettysburg school board, Lloyd C. Keefauver, Steinwehr avenue, assistant county superintendent, was elected supervising principal of the Gettysburg public schools, succeeding Walter D. Reynolds, whose resignation was accepted by the board Wednesday evening.

This afternoon Mr. Keefauver, who has been assistant to County superintendent W. Raymond Shank since 1922, said he had accepted the position at a salary of $2,600 a year, $100 a year more than the amount paid Mr. Reynolds at the present time. Mr. Keefauver will assume his new duties in July.

At the same time the board elected four new teachers, two for the high school and two for the Meade building. The two new high school teachers, who also are to conduct the physical training classes, are Grayson Peters, Gettysburg, and Miss Miriam D. Kelly, a native of Carlisle.

Ray Shetter, Straban township, was named teacher for the fifth grade, while Miss Nellie Keller, Franklin township, was elected for the third grade.

School Board Fails to Meet Salary Level of Northumberland County City: Walter D. Reynolds, supervising principal of the Gettysburg public schools and a teacher at the high school here for fourteen years, at 9 o'clock Thursday morning, informed the president of the Sunbury school board of his acceptance of Sunbury's offer to become principal of the high school there.

The principal will assume his new duties in August. The salary is said to be $3,500 a year, with annual increases of $200 until the $4,000 mark is reached.

Just Folks

EDGAR A. GUEST

A CHILD COMES DOWNSTAIRS
He came softly down the stairs
And he took us unawares
As we sat there very gravely
Talking over big affairs;
And he made a pretty sight
In his "jimmies" pink and white,
To his mother's consternation,
But I'll say to my delight.

Things were rather dull I'll swear,
And half dozing in my chair
I deplored the idle chatter
Till I saw him standing there!
Down the stairs he crept alone
And his little features shone
With a radiant look of rapture
As he made his presence known.

"Sonny boy!" his mother said,
"You're supposed to be in bed.
Don't you know the Sandma's waiting
For each little sleepy head?"
But we halted him with delight,
For no lovelier a sight
Can the eyes of old folks witness
Than a little child at night.

And I thought as off he went
To his bed at last content
What so sweet a visitation
To us weary grownups meant,
For it broke the dullness there,
With a flash of beauty rare,
Just to see that little fellow
Standing smiling on the stair.

Today's Talk
By George Matthew Adams
PLEASE YOURSELF—FIRST
WE ADMIRE originality and uniqueness. Largely because it means that the person who shows it, has given thought and concentration to the thing at hand and has been self-reliant.
Michelangelo refused to paint a picture to order, and Melissander once stated that he had a circle more exacting than any other. "It is my other self," he said.
The writer who writes first to please himself is the one I like to read, for then I know that I am dipping into the very heart of the author himself. True, such an author rarely becomes popular in his day, but he remains honest and happy in his heart. Many an author who starved a hundred years or so ago is read today as a classic. It is a sad commentary upon human appreciation, but it is all too often true.
It is far better to sacrifice a full stomach than to live with a starved soul.
Please yourself, first—and then, if your toll and efforts have been honest and sincere, the judgment of posterity is sure to be kind.
Emerson urged the strong man to speak his mind plainly and honestly, though it contradicted everything he thought the day before.
We can speak frankly and with a wide-open mind without being bitter and cruel. Frankness is admired. The trimmer in thought and conduct only rides with the crest of the wave. There is nothing permanent about his achievements.
Painters for several hundred years have gone back to Rembrandt for inspiration—but Rembrandt went back to no one. He painted from himself, and his matchless etchings and paintings have stood every test of time ever since.
The true artist, whether writer, painter, or actor, is great only as he is himself, creating his art from within himself.
The imitator only courts temporary gain and glory. Please yourself and you are sure of individual immortality, at least.

PATTERN 9794
What's a frock to do when the matron asks that it be slimming, the slim Young Thing asks freedom of it and the one who gains pounds this week and loses them the next, requires it be adjustable. Answer is, that frock must combine all three—as does this wrap-around—so everybody's happy. You, too, will want it.

IN MEMORIAM

A thought of sweet remembrance of our dear son, John Glen Bierly, who departed this life two years ago,
March 22, 1934.

A precious one from us is gone,
A voice we loved is still;
A place is vacant in our home
Which never can be filled.

Sleep on dear son, and take your rest,
God called you home, He thought it best;
In silence you suffered, in patience
you bore,
Until God called you home to suffer
no more.

Sadly missed by his father and mother.

Oh! how sad and sudden was the call,
Of one who died beloved by all:
Your life was sweet, the brief severe.
We little thought the end so near.

There is a mother who misses you sadly,
And finds the time long since you left,
For you were ours and we remember,
Though all the world may forget.

'Tis sad but true, we wonder why?
The best are always the first to die;
His troubles are over, he suffers no more,
He is resting with Jesus on the beautiful shore.

Sadly missed by his Brothers and Sisters.

BETTER A STICKER FROM YOUR GARAGE
THAN A TICKET FROM THE POLICE

The Pennsylvania Motor Code makes it compulsory that all motor vehicles be inspected as to condition of brakes, lights and equipment which affect the safety of motor traffic. There are two inspection periods in each year.
Motor vehicles not equipped with "approved" stickers are barred from the highways in the three month intervals between the inspection periods.
Owners of uninspected vehicles are subject to a fine of $10 and costs or five days in jail, in default. Certain garages have been designated by the state to inspect cars according to the law—go to one today and have your car inspected—get your sticker.
